"ABBEY" ROW | 224

Tamasin Day-Lewis and Jason Bell spotlight the "Downton Abbey" cast, going into season two—and World War I.

THE CODE OF THE WINKLEVII | 226

Mark Zuckerberg doesn't have a single nemesis—he's got two: Cameron and Tyler Winklevoss, who, after claiming that Zuckerberg stole their idea for Facebook, won a settlement currently valued at $200 million. Refusing to give up, they now believe they got only a quarter of what they deserved. Dana Vachon discovers that the twins are in it to win it. Photographs by Sam Jones.

SCHOOLED BY SCORSESE | 233

Jim Windolf and Chris Craymer spotlight Asa Butterfield, Martin Scorsese's first 3-D hero.

LET THE GAMES BEGIN! | 234

Krista Smith and Sam Jones spotlight The Hunger Games, as Suzanne Collins's best-selling trilogy heads to the screen.

THE INVINCIBLE MRS. THATCHER | 236

During her 11 years at No. 10 Downing, Margaret Thatcher was in her element, remaking Great Britain from top to bottom. Her official biographer, Charles Moore, assesses the Iron Lady's legacy as the nation's first and, as yet, only female prime minister, one who relished playing with the boys—and beating them.

WIDOW OF OPPORTUNITY | 130

Listening to the newly released tapes of Jacqueline Kennedy's 1964 interviews with Arthur Schlesinger Jr., Christopher Hitchens hears the tinny sound of history being distorted.

STILL CUCKOO AFTER ALL THESE YEARS | 134

A half-century after it helped spark the 60s counterculture, One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest still resonates with James Wolcott, who wonders if Ken Kesey's legend might inspire a new generation of rebels.

"YOU RARELY get a tentpole that has such emotional depth."

LET THE GAMES BEGIN!

Those mourning the passing of the Harry Potter cycle and dreading the looming end of the Twilight saga, Suzanne Collins has come to the rescue with her spellbinding trilogy of novels, The Hunger Games, Catching Fire, and Mockingjay. The first comes to movie theaters on March 23. The post-apocalyptic drama takes place in Panem, a North American country that is divided into 12 districts. Every year children between the ages of 12 and 18 must enter their names in a lottery known as "the reaping." Each district selects a boy and a girl to compete with the representatives of the other districts in a televised fight to the death. The final victor wins a life free from want. Collins got the idea for the books from watching footage of the Iraq war and reality television. Adapted for the screen by writer-director Gary Ross (Seabiscuit), the films are positioned to be Hollywood's next big teen franchise. "My kids turned me on to it, and I went nuts," says Ross, adding, "You rarely get a tentpole that has this much emotional depth, this much character to dive into." Jennifer Lawrence, who received an Oscar nomination last year for her performance in Winter's Bone, is Katniss, the heroine, who, when her younger sister gets picked in the reaping, volunteers to take her place. "Katniss is an incredible character: she's a hunter but not a killer, a 16-year-old who's being forced into the arena," says Lawrence. "These kids are killing one another only because if they don't they'll die. It's heartbreaking." Josh Hutcherson (The Kids Are All Right) plays Peeta, who has loved Katniss since childhood and who is also chosen in the reaping. "I literally read all three books over the course of five days," he says. "My mind was blown by how much I felt I was like Peeta. We shot in the forest near Asheville, North Carolina—a lot of fight scenes, very physically demanding. Jennifer and I totally hit it off. We're both crazy people—we don't hold anything back." Ross concludes, "My responsibility was to Suzanne and the readers, to give them the same experience they had when they read the book. I was just so lucky that I had the cast I had." —KRISTA SMITH
